Thanksgiving: A Day of Thanks

by Kelly Hashway

What do parades, lots of family, and delicious meals of turkey and pumpkin pie add up to? One holiday you can really be thankful for.

Thanksgiving originated in Europe as a way to celebrate the harvest and give thanks. When the tradition came to North America, it first took place in Canada. An explorer from England named Martin Frobisher came to Newfoundland in 1578. He celebrated his safe arrival in the New World and began the tradition of Thanksgiving in North America. This was forty-three years before the pilgrims landed in Plymouth, Massachusetts.

In Canada, the celebration of this holiday was centered around the harvest, which meant the date changed each year, falling between late October and early November. In 1879, Thanksgiving was declared a national holiday, and November 6 was the date set to celebrate. But the date was changed again because the Canadian Parliament decided they didn't want Thanksgiving and Remembrance Day (November 11) to fall in the same week. So it was decided that Thanksgiving would be celebrated on the second Monday of October.

In the United States the holiday is celebrated on the fourth Thursday of November. Why is thanksgiving celebrated on different days in Canada and the United States? Well, geography might have something to do with it. Since Canada is further north than the United States, the Canadian harvest season arrives earlier. And in Canada, Thanksgiving focuses on the harvest season, not on the arrival of pilgrims like Thanksgiving in the United States.

But whether you celebrate Thanksgiving in October or November, it's a time to give thanks and appreciate the harvest season. And what better way to celebrate than with parades, family, and good food?
